We are at resent very much hampered. Our total capital is altogether insufficient. The demand f r our commodities is practically aplimited, and we are obliged to increase our herd in order to meet this increasing demand. We shall be obliged to erect some additional buildings at Pokfulum. We have now four circular cowaheds and we propose to erect two or more in addition. Mr. McCulloch-There is one question I should like to ask with regard to this resolution.

The CHAIRMAN -The remaining 4,000 shares are offered to the public, including the shareholders in the Dairy Farm Company as a portion of the public. Any person is at liberty to apply for any portion of the 4,000 shares. Mr. McCulloca - You have merely stated what I have seen in print. It seems to me, con sidering that the original shareholders have been holding their shares so long, and have been lesing so much interest and getting no return for their money, that it would be hardly fair to let the new sharsholders come in at par. That is matter of course for consideration, but it is a thing I should like to bring to the notice of the directors. at bundred hills of the island, rising precipitously behind the city to the signal station, 1823 feet above the sea, where a gun and a dagstaff announce the arrival of mails and ocean steamers. But "the Peak" as a residential district means all the hill-tops where good breezes from the see blow in summer, where one can sleep under a blanket at night, and where in a word one can spend a summer in Hongkong with a reasonable probability of being alive at the end of it. Here everybody, who can affo d it has a second house. and so many are these fortunate people that the "top side" of the island is dotted all over with coatly houses and bungalows; there is one hotel and another building, and a steam transway rune up and down every fifteen minutes. The fere up la thirty cents-a shilling, and down half as much. This is startling enough, but a better notion of the expanse of life here is conveyed by the fact that to have a second house at " the Peak" for the summer, you must rent it for the whole year, as it is uninhabitable in winter, at a rental of 150 to 200 dollars a month-about a sovereign a day all the year round for four or five months residence. Besides this, there is the tramway fare, the cost of sociles to carry your chair up and down, and the expense of bringing every item of domestic supplies, from coals to cabbage, a forty-five minutes elimb up-hill. But what is the summer climate on the second storey of Hongkong, you will ask, which forces people to flee from it at so much trouble and cost? To be frank, almost every man have asked has described it to me by the monosyllabic appellation of the ultimate destination of the incorrigible unrighteous. One of the chief summer problems of Hongkong is to deormine whether the mushrooms which grow on your boots during the night are edible or not The damp is indescribable Moisture pours down the walls, anything left alone for a couple of days-clothes, boots, hats, portmanteaux-is covered with mould. I wanty steps in the open air and you are soaked with perspiration. 'i han there are the cockroneles, to say nothing of the ngile centicedo whose bito may lay you up for a month-we killed one under the table-after tiffin the other day. When the booksellers here receive a case of books, the first thing they do is to varnish thom all over with a damp-resisting composition containing corrosive sublimate. Otherwise the cockrosches would eat them be: fore they had time to go mouldy. If you come home at night after dinner very tired, literally or metaphorically, beware of carelessly throwing your evening clothes over a chair, as you would at home. If you do, the cockronohes will have destroyed them before you wake. They must be hung up in a wardrobe with hermetically fitting doors. And it does happen, I am told, that men die in enumer in Hongkong from sunrise to sunset, without rhyme or reason. And the community is a pale-faced one, though it is only right to add that it numbers probably as many athletes and vigorous workers as any other. The place used to be known as "the grave of regiments"-a stroll though "Happy Talley' tells you why. Now the men are not allowed outside barracks until five p.m. and in the world, is disappointing.
